CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY

1980-81
Montreal, Que.

John W. O'Brien, Rector and Vice-Chancellor

When you look at this book ten or fifteen years from now you will recall familiar faces and highlights of your university years. You will also recognize many who will have become prominent in a variety of fields. In time, you may hardly recognize yourselves in the image of today although appearances and job titles can be misleading, disguising qualities of character that carry from one period to another.

At university, essential elements of character form patterns as you assess the future and develop the analytical tools needed to pursue goals you have set for yourself. The type of education you have chosen and your decision to become members of the Concordia community have a natural impact on your make-up. If your generation follows tradition, you too will play roles in shaping society and so it is worth asking if there are any qualities of character which may be described as specifically 'Concordian'. My own answer would be 'yes' and two qualities immediately spring to mind. One certainly has to be an individual and collective instinct to excel despite modest material resources. Concordia, like its founding components Loyola and Sir George Williams, has historically been one of the most under-financed institutions in the country.

Another quality would have to be an abiding sense of cooperation and compromise as members of two celebrated and distinct academic communities come together to make an exciting and enduring new university. And out of the second comes a third quality: a capacity to innovate and adapt to new and challenging circumstances. Graduates of Concordia's new colleges perhaps know this better than others but change to a greater or lesser degree has been a feature across the faculties as the university continued to adjust to emerging realities.

These features might be summarized as resourcefulness, a word that carries special meaning to graduates who have pursued degrees on a part-time basis. For many in this group, life has been a continuing juggling act as academic work competed for time with family and work commitments.

Like graduates of other universities, Concordia's can claim to have pursued excellence in the classroom and on the playing field. But to that, they can justifiably add the credential of resourcefulness. And clearly society needs people who can grasp situations and respond to them in imaginative ways. Graduates of past years have proven this in a variety of fields - in government, in the professions, in industry and in the arts. I refer to the men and women who now look at their old yearbooks with the astonished glances I suggest you will one day give to the words and photographs contained in this edition.

Resourcefulness has more immediate dimension for many of you. It hardly needs to be said that these are difficult times; economic conditions offer reduced employment opportunities and those of you venturing into the work place for the first time will experience special demands on your capacity to be resourceful.

It is my belief that your years at Concordia have given you a head start and if the record is any indication, you will use it well. To all of you, congratulations and good luck.

A blending of old and new

With this premiere issue of The Link, the changing face of Concordia is reflected.

It is the product of a merger between Concordia's former campus papers, Loyola News and The Georgian, with histories of fifty-six and forty-four years respectively. Talk of merging these newspapers began, logically enough, at the inception of the university. At first it was regarded as a ridiculous proposition, there being such apparent differences between the two papers and their long-established traditions.

As the Concordia merger progressed, the animosity between camps mellowed enough to permit the unification of four of the student associations in 1979, leaving the two newspapers among the few remaining groups which were more and more merging but had not done so. It seemed to be more and more inevitable to the staffs of Loyola News and The Georgian, though not necessarily desirable.

Over the winter holidays of 1979-80, they first met to discuss the possibility of a merger. With a marked degree of wariness about their counterparts, tentative plans were worked out in some detail. Proposals were then taken back to the respective staffs to see if they were at all acceptable.

In late January, 1980, after lengthy consideration, the staffs of The Georgian and Loyola News voted to form one newspaper. There was little fanfare about the decision. Though the possibilities of a single Concordia newspaper were exciting, it was a scary venture. Never before in the history of Canadian student press had two firmly established and quite distinct newspapers decided to join forces in a single effort.

The principal reasoning behind the merger was the final acceptance, however reluctant, of Concordia as a unified institution, and there being a need to make an effort to solidify that union. Basically, it seemed to be an excellent idea at the time.

It still is.

Garnet Key Society

WHAT IS THE GARNET KEY SOCIETY?

Have you ever wondered what goes on behind the door of room H-730-1 (just behind "Reggies")? Or what those students dressed in garnet coloured skirts and white blazers (or garnet blazers and grey pants - depending on your persuasion) do for the University? No, we are not Air Canada flight attendants on campus recruiting, rather we represent the Concordia Garnet Key Society.

Members of the Garnet Key Society act as official hosts and hostesses of the university. What exactly does this involve? Our society is not CUSA subsidized, but subsidized by the faculty of the university, specifically reporting to Vice-Rector, Graham Martin. This means that the members are not elected by the student body, but rather are chosen by a selection committee on the basis of personality, academic standing and other relevant criteria decided upon by the committee. Both campuses and all faculties are represented in the society, ensuring a diverse membership.

We attend staff and faculty functions such as: the Long Service Awards; Convocations; and the Rector's receptions, to name but a few. Our main duties involve mingling and talking to prominent members of the university and business community, discussing the University and its functions.

Valuable experience is gained in public relations and all members benefit from the experience of being a member of the Garnet Key Society.

The Association of Alumni of Sir George Williams continues to play an active role in the life of Concordia University. By communicating with alumni through the "Concordia University Magazine" and by sponsoring social functions and reunions throughout the year it preserves the fellowship of graduates and perpetuates the link with the new university. The association has recently expanded its activities by establishing chapters in various cities in Canada, the U.S. and overseas.

Handicap Information Centre praised

Michael Sotiron
The Handicap Information Centre on the Sir George campus has been open for little more than a year, yet its level of accomplishment and efficiency is already considered to be on a par with York University, the acknowledged university leader in servicing the handicapped. What makes this rating especially striking for Jim Dubois, the director of the centre, is that this opinion comes from other than York University itself. Indeed, as Dubois, a third-year student in anthropology, and in a wheelchair himself, points out, Concordia accomplished this with far fewer resources at its disposal. York University, explains Dubois, has been operating for three years with a staff of two full-time people and one part-timer on a budget of $40,000. At Sir George, he is the only person on the staff, and works part-time with a budget of $1,000.

Jim Dubois

transcribing tapes and so on. The Centre is always on the lookout for volunteers, says Dubois, and they have first crack at any resource materials at the Centre they may find.

The Centre came into existence in response to the needs of an increasing number of handicapped students at Concordia. In April, the Handicap Information Centre is a drop-in place for casual conversation and exchange of information between handicapped and also non-handicapped students. Dubois says that handicapped can be terribly lonely. At times, the Centre has provided a new slant on university life. He is quoted as saying: "Up until this point, most of my spare time outside of my next class, alone. I have never had friends that I have met at the Centre and I am proud of that university life."

There is given to handicapped students the opportunity of contemplating coming to Concordia and those who have become newly handicapped. The latter especially have no idea as to the services available not only at Concordia but in the community at large.

Loyola renovations increase handicapped accessibility to make the Loyola campus accessible to handicapped students are ne Kerby, the director of handicapped services and of Students, the immediate aim is to make the Loyola campus as accessible to the handicapped as the Sir George Williams campus.

The renovations will be considerable (accompanying box) and will involve, among others, new curbs, ramps, push-button elevators, and lower telephones. But improvements represent only part of the mandate of handicapped services. It will maintain liaison with other units about their handicapped services and eventually prepare a profile on the services available at Concordia.

An important part of the mandate is to sensitize the university community to the situation of the estimated 75-100 handicapped people on campus. Says Kerby:

"While these renovations will make essential services and more classroom facilities available, the job of making the university fully accessible to these students has just begun."

"Considering that certain programs are offered on only one campus and that the campus offers its own unique style of life, it is very strongly that handicapped students should have the same choices available."

Making the community aware of the needs of the handicapped is an exciting prospect for Kerby. She is planning workshops, films, photographic exhibitions, and discussions about the needs of the handicapped. The estimated cost of these renovations is $500,000.

Most of us take the university for granted and don't realize the day-to-day life of a handicapped person. For example, a handicapped person has a difficult time getting around."

Concordia doubles effort to open up more facilities to the handicapped

The university is prepared to move barriers, or people, in its quest to close the gap between handicapped and non handicapped.

Facilities for handicapped to be improved at Loyola

By FRANCESCA WORRALL

Facilities for the physically handicapped at Loyola will be improved over the next year as make the campus accessible to the University's handicapped.

Concordia's Loyola is a physically handicapped student," said Co-ordinator of Services. "It is aimed at campus up to the levels proposed by the Rights of the Handicapped. It includes building ramps for wheelchair users and other features of the plan are curb cuts, parking spaces for wheelchairs, and widened, automatic doors. All are expected to be completed before winter.

Other headaches

There are other headaches such as out-of-reach elevator buttons and a lack of systems for the deaf.

"Many of the things can be useful to people who are handicapped," Kerby says. "Ramps, for instance, will be used by Food Services, and anybody carrying an armload of books will appreciate an automatic door."

The structural changes are one part of a two-faceted plan. Besides having to overcome architectural barriers, an important aspect of Kerby's job is promoting awareness and making people examine their hangups and prejudices on the subject.

"Both sides have to be said. 'If you are a wheelchair user, you can be a looking for volunteers to assist with outings for the physically handicapped, I try to impress on people that they are not subnormal human beings. I tell you know that people with a wheelchair may be a French translator."

Professors and allowances make physical students in their own right. For example, Kerby says, "There are many changes a faculty member can make to facilitate the learning of a handicapped student without jeopardizing the academic integrity of the course. We don't want to modify teaching techniques, but only the flexibility in the way we deliver the course."

As an example of the changes, she mentions the case of a blind student submitting a verbal report on a tape. Anne Kerby is putting out a call for all handicapped students and faculty members to get in touch with her at the Loyola Dean of Students Office (AD 125 or 432-0320 ext. 358) or Jim Dubois of the Handicap Information Centre (H580-2 or 879-8198).

In order to stand up to the problems faced by handicapped students, the Services division, in cooperation with other departments, will launch an awareness program at the end of October. It will consist of films, photographic exhibitions, displays, talks and an information booth.

During the summer of 1980 Professors J.A. Macaluso and J. Pratt (Department of Modern Languages and Linguistics) conducted a four-week summer session in Colombia, South America. They were accompanied by twenty-eight students who desired to learn the language, culture and history in the 'milieu de vie'. CELANESE
IN QUEBEC

In the 54 years since Celanese established its roots in Drummondville, Quebec, we've spread into other locations in the Province and branched out into distant parts of Canada.

Today, from our Head Office in Montreal, we direct the activities of eight manufacturing plants; four of which are located in Quebec.

From our modest beginning, we've turned into a four hundred million dollar Company and we're not through yet.

Our products are seen and used every day - you may drive on tires reinforced with our polyester cord, wear Fortrel polyester blouses or slacks, walk on Celanese carpets, sleep between Fortrel polyester sheets or use our industrial chemicals in a variety of products from paints to windshield washers.

Yes, we're here and we're still growing - with Quebec.
